

It appears that there are more and more charges that I have to pay just to keep my privacy. I have to pay for caller-ID, then more to block "anonymous" calls, and even more again to have an unlisted number. Now the phone company wants me to pay even more for "privacy manager" yet I have heard that the phone company is selling my number to the telemarketers. This sounds like organized crime to me. The people making these calls should be paying for the privilege, and not force me to pay more and more to try to have some peace and quiet.
